THE NO WEDDING BRIDE: WHAT YOU NEED FOR AN ORGANISED ELOPEMENT

A growing number of brides are walking away from the traditional wedding in favor of elopements. Now, we don't mean, drive through the night to get married by an Elvis Presley impersonator in viva Las Vegas. We're talking about luxury affairs with only a handful of guests- think Blair Waldorf, Phoebe Buffay and Lily Aldrin's wedding. Mix it with Zoe Saldana, Jessica Alba The new generation of elopements are organised and intimate affairs, to have the wedding be solely about the commitment between the two of you.

Why have an organised elopement?

1. Intimacy

We love big weddings, but there's no denying that the minimalism and subtlety of a organised elopement means, the newlywed couple can enjoy the day in those first moments as a married couple without any distractions.

2. A stunning backdrop

Nothing is more beautiful like mother nature and having your wedding by the snowy mountains or wedding day will truly be the best day of your life.

3. Why stress over the planning

Half the drama of getting married comes from the stress of planning the day. Between seating arrangements, the perfect-tasting cake, picking your first dance song and hiring transport, it's no surprise planning a wedding can be overwhelming.
